

People Inspire Me

by:

Susannah Clary

New Mexico, United States

The age in which a person becomes involved in something is an age that should be taken seriously. Science is a passion many share all over the world. Some express this passion with excitement while others express theirs' quietly. All in all, people are all people and if you look around at the faces of the world, this should be enough to inspire any one person towards their passion. People inspire me to excel in science. Where we are today is a result of people using their gifts of knowledge to bring people forward. Working together with people for one purpose or one cause can bring different cultures, religions and genders closer to better our world and better our friendships.